Scope and Content

This collection contains textbooks used by Boone County students in the early 20th-century. Subjects covered range from elementary readers to high school mathematics texts. Most, if not all, of the books have the names of the student owners written on their inside covers; several also include the name of the teacher. Two of the books are not textbooks but novels awarded to students by teachers. As artifacts of Boone County schools, these books provide evidence for what students in the early 20th century learned and how they learned it.

The collection also includes ephemera found inside some of the books. These items include notes and assignments from students and advertisements. The ephemera is organized based on the book in which it was found.
